The Historical Society of Southern California was founded on November 1, 1883, and incorporated February 13, 1891. It has enjoyed an unbroken record of continuous activity and growth. Commencing in 1884, and each year through 1934, the society issued an Annual Publication. In 1935 The Quarterly (later renamed the Southern California Quarterly) was initiated. The Society's publications through 1976 have been indexed and described in a concise abstract of articles by Anna Marie and Everett Gordon Hager (comps.), A Bibliography (1958), The Topical Index (1959), and Cumulative Index (1977). The current issue and all back issues are available online to members of the Society (regular level and higher) and through subscribing libraries.

CONTRIBUTORS

Shana Klein holds a Ph.D. in Art History from the University of New Mexico, where she completed the dissertation, “The Fruits of Empire: Contextualizing Food in Post-Civil War American Art and Culture.” This project, now under advance contract to become a book, probes how the representation and cultivation of food participated in the broader cultivation of American empire. Klein has been awarded several fellowships for her research, including one at the German Historical Institute in partnership with Georgetown University.

Ellen Macfarlane is a PhD candidate in the Department of Art & Archaeology at Princeton University. Her research is focused on modern art and the history of photography, with a particular concentration on the intersection of aesthetics and politics in the U.S., 1890–1945. Ellen’s dissertation, “Seeing Plus: The Photography of Group f.64,” has received support from The American Council of Learned Societies, the Smithsonian American Art Museum, the Center for Creative Photography, and the Huntington Library. Her new research on Western Worker is the basis for a second book-length project about the photographic aesthetics of U.S. radical periodicals from 1920 to 1934.

Bonnie M. Miller is an Associate Professor of American Studies at University of Massachusetts Boston. Her book, From Liberation to Conquest: The Visual and Popular Cultures of the Spanish American War of 1898, came out in 2011 with the University of Massachusetts Press. She recently published “The Evolution of a Fast Food Phenomenon: The Case of American Pizza” in Routledge History of Food (2014). She has also published numerous other articles and book chapters on topics such as the commemorative stamp issue of the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition of 1898, the visual dimensions of old-time radio, and the evolution of war propaganda for American military campaigns of the last two centuries.

Leonard Schmieding is a historian of modern Germany. He received his PhD in 2011 with a dissertation on hip-hop culture in East Germany during the Cold War. His research interests include music and popular culture, food and drink, and museums and material culture. He is currently based at the University of Münster, where he works on the history of German reunification in the West.

L. Stephen Velasquez is a Curator for the Division of Home and Community Life, National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution. He is the project director for “Mexican Vineyard Workers in Napa: Work, Culture, and Community.” He was co-curator for Food: Transforming the American Table 1950–2000; Many Voices, One Nation, the Bracero Oral History Project and exhibit, Bittersweet Harvest: The Bracero Program 1942–1964. Past projects include, Mexican Treasures at the Smithsonian; AZUCAR! The Life and Music of Celia Cruz; and Julia Child’s Kitchen at the Smithsonian. He is currently involved in research and collecting projects on Latinos and baseball and on American brewing history.

Cover: The beautiful foliage and spectacular bloom, 4–5 inches across, of a Matilija poppy (Romneya coulteri), a Southern California native plant found in the Santa Monica and San Gabriel mountains in late spring, early summer. M. Ovnick, May 2017.
